

Today, Medicare
and Medicaid waste,
fraud and abuse cost American taxpayers tens of billions of dollars.

That's why – as Washington looks for ways to reduce federal spending – strengthening Medicare and Medicaid program integrity and enforcement must be a top priority.

Congressional leaders, the Administration, and community advocates have proposed strong measures to fight Medicare and Medicaid waste, fraud and abuse.

This is the right direction, and it should be pursued before any dollar is taken from senior citizens and Americans with disabilities or from the benefits they depend upon.

Americans overwhelmingly support program integrity and enforcement reform as a way to protect patients and generate savings. So do we. And so should Congress.
